at the East St. Louis National stockyards had "combined to put into effect a gractical boyeott against independent commission companies," Secretary Wallace Issued his first order under the packers and stockyards act, directing the respondents to "cease from the practice" on the ground that their acts "constituted a restraint of trade in violation of the stockyards act.

Secretary Wallace announced that the decision was reached after hearings held at the stock yards early in April and conferences with all parties to the complaint, and was based on a finding approved by a nexaminer for the department. As a result of the secretary's order, it was announced, the penal provisions of the stockyards act chould be invoked against any one of the respondents who might violate any of the provisions of the order.
